

PATHWAYS TO COLORADO'S HERITAGE

Colorado Archaeology and Historic Preservation Month—May 2010

The Colorado Department of Transportation, steward of the state's transportation infrastructure, is celebrating its 100th anniversary in 2010. Efficient and reliable transportation has long been a critical element in the development of Colorado. From Native American trails, to wagon roads and railroads, to a formalized network of highways and airports, our state's transportation system has evolved quickly and dramatically. The past 100 years in Colorado have seen some of the greatest transportation engineering accomplishments anywhere in the United States. Join our endeavors this month as we focus on the importance of preserving this valuable heritage.
