Abstract

Edwin Carl Johnson (1884-1970) served two terms as Colorado Governor and represented his state for three consecutive terms in the United States Senate. The Edwin C. Johnson Collection consists of correspondence, reports, meeting transcripts and news clippings and illustrates Johnson work on the development of Colorado's highway system and water conservation.

Background Note

Governor Edwin Carl Johnson, later affectionately dubbed "Big Ed", was born in Scandia, Kansas on January 1, 1884. Shortly after, his family moved to Nebraska where in 1903 Johnson graduated from high school and immediately began pursued a career in railroads eventually becoming a train dispatcher.

Unfortunately, in 1909 Johnson contracted tuberculosis and like many TB patients of that time went to Colorado to convalesce. After his recovery, he and his wife decided to make Colorado their permanent residency and built a home near Craig, Colorado.

In 1923, Johnson entered to world of politics serving four consecutive terms on the Colorado House of Representatives. He went on to serve as Lieutenant Governor, Governor from 1933-1937 and again from 1955-1957 and represented his state in the United States Senate for three consecutive terms from 1937 until 1955. Edwin C. Johnson died on May 30, 1970

Scope and Content

This collection consists of eight linear feet of correspondence, meeting reports and transcripts, news clippings and printed material dating from 1934 to 1968. The bulk of the material represents to the years from 1955 to 1962 when Johnson was active in the Colorado Water Conservation Board, the Upper Colorado River Commission and the development of a Colorado highway system. What is not represented in this collection is Johnson's early work in Colorado politics.
