

DENVER, LARAMIE & NORTHWESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY – MSS 826

revised Sept. 1988

A Collection of the Colorado Historical Society
all rights reserved

The Denver, Laramie & Northwestern Railroad Company was incorporated in 1910 to build a rail line from Denver to Greeley, and from there, to Laramie, Wyoming and Boise, Idaho. Only the Denver to Greeley segment was completed. The enterprise organized a subsidiary, the Greeley Terminal Railway Company, to hold all franchises and property within the limits of the City of Greeley. Control of the Denver, Laramie and Northwestern passed to the Denver, Laramie and Northern in 1917, the year in which the track from Denver to Greeley was abandoned and dismantled.

The collection contains a booklet titled Souvenir, The Denver, Laramie and Northwestern Railroad, 1908; a promotional booklet titled Views, issued by the Denver, Laramie & Northwestern, n.d.; time table (1912); and a report by T. S. Murray, "the Greeley Terminal Railway Co. Investigation of Its Franchises, Property, Capitalization, Indebtedness, Operation" (Nov. 15, 1913).
