Abstract	Items in the collection were donated by Karen Wilde. Wilde was a state Democratic congressional candidate from Douglas County in 2006 and was active in state politics. Items in the collection are a unique representation of the Native American Democratic caucus. This collection is part of a larger collection containing objects related to the Ute Mountain Ute Tribe. Items were given to Wilde as an appreciation of her work for the Colorado Commission of Indian Affairs. Included in this portion of the collection are three journals and one leaflet collected during the convention. These items demonstrate important views and topics expressed by attendees. This collection is evidence of Obama's popularity among minority and women voters. In addition, researchers learn how Denver hosted and responded to the convention.
