Ute Knowledge: Colorado's Original Scientists Pre-History to Modern Day

Pre-Visit Activities

The following activities can help students understand some of the important themes that they will be introduced to during the Ute Knowledge program. If possible, we recommend doing all four activities before the scheduled visit.

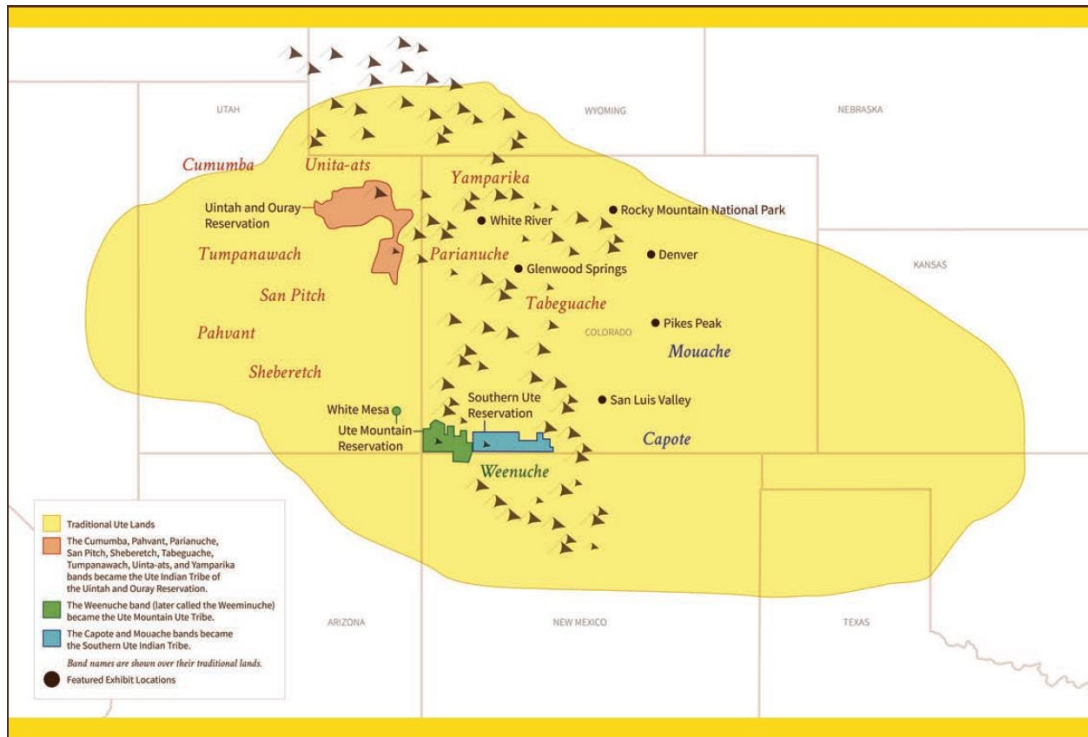

Most suggestions have been pulled from the Nuu-cui Strong Resource Guide through the CDE.

Background on Ute People

The Ute Indians are one people, seven bands, and today, three tribes. Their long history goes back generations, and was shaped by interaction with their environment and their neighbors.

Historic changes since 1849 have dramatically impacted the Ute way of life. Their relationship with the land shapes their Ute language, dances, and ceremonies. The Ute People's place in their tribes, their bands, and their families form their identities as Ute. They are Colorado's oldest continuous residents and are still here today. The Ute live in the modern world and carry on their traditions.

The Ute People's original territory included Colorado and Utah, and parts of New Mexico, Arizona and Wyoming. They thrived in the diverse ecosystems of the Rocky Mountains and high plateaus. To the east and north of the Ute People were the Arapahos, Cheyennes, Kiowas, Apaches, Comanches, Sioux (Lakotas) and Pawnees. To the south were the Pueblos, Navajos, and Apaches. To the north and northwest were the Shoshones, Bannocks, Paiutes, and Goshutes.

Ute

Ute people speak different dialects of the same language. Their ancestors spoke this language, but it wasn't written down. In modern times, spellings of the same word vary depending on the dialect that is being recorded. The Ute language shares structure and vocabulary with the Numic group of languages. Their nearby neighbors the Paiute, Shoshone, Comanche, and Hopi also speak Numic languages.

The Ute People call themselves Nuuchu (also spelled Nuu-ciu), which means "the human" or "the Ute". The name "Ute" comes from Spanish explorers, whose American Indian neighbors called them "Yoo'tawtch" and "Guaputa". "Guaputa" is the Jemez Pueblo Indian word for "people who live in stick houses."

Today, there are three Ute tribes:

- Southern Ute Indian Tribe, headquartered in Ignacio, Colorado (Capote and Mouache).
- Ute Mountain Ute Tribe, headquartered in Towaoc, Colorado and White Mesa, Utah.
- Ute Indian Tribe of the Uintah and Ouray Reservation, headquartered in Fort Duchesne, Utah.
